

SAINT GEORGE CLASSICAL READERS

A Group of Readers

We are a group of readers that gather together to read and discuss great works of literature. Our conversations place the work of literature in its historical and intellectual context, and our engagement with these challenging, but edifying texts is done with reverence wherein, with humility we come to learn from them. For they have much to teach us if we but give them our attention.

The Where and the When

The Saint George Classical Readers will return to its regular discussion of great literature on Thursday, July 10th. The group will now gather online and will meet weekly on Thursday evenings at 7:00 P.M

The Next Read

Our next read will be determined via the survey below where interested readers share their preference. The titles currently in running are:

- The Iliad - Homer
- The Republic - Plato
- Nicomachean Ethics - Aristotle
- Jane Eyre - Charlotte Bronte
- Lord of the Rings - J.R.R. Tolkien

Join The Conversation

In a time when our attention is constantly harassed by shallow, vain, base, and foolish things, seeking to render us passive and disengaged, and our ability to attend and think is waning, I encourage you to join us in edifying conversation and contemplation of higher things: the beautiful, the good, and the true as it is found and experienced in great works of literature.

“And since it is through virtue that we must enter upon this life of ours, and since much has been uttered in praise of virtue by poets, much by historians, and much more still by philosophers, we ought especially to apply ourselves to such literature.”

-Saint Basil the Great
